

Team of four to oversee programs at Doon

A new team of four will oversee the management of Doon campus programs starting this month, said associate director Tony Martinek.

A memo issued to staff and faculty by director Dave Putt on Oct. 7 said Pat Carter and Grant McGregor will join Martinek and Putt in forming the team.

They will initially clarify lines of communication, and follow that with "a review of the longer-term requirements of an organization structure at the Doon campus."

The loss of Bernie McKeever last spring and of Bonita Russell at the end of the summer prompted the decision to restructure the management of programs, Martinek said.

Martinek stressed that Carter and McGregor are strictly on loan for the project and are not replacing McKeever and Russell on a one-for-one basis.

He said Carter and McGregor will work with him and Putt but will have authority and will be responsible for specific matters. Details were to be worked out at a meeting with co-ordinators on Oct. 10.

"They will stay here until such time as a new academic structure at Doon campus can be put in place.

"This is not a decision that has been made by the president or the director or anybody else," he said.

A meeting was held with the co-ordinators of programs to discuss the switch and find out if there was general support for it. The co-ordinators were asked to discuss the proposal with faculty and report back.

Martinek said the majority of co-ordinators responded positively to the idea, as did the faculty members.

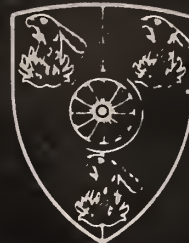

The new team will deal with any issues that co-ordinators feel are important to the delivery of academic services. The co-ordinators will be actively involved in that process as well, he said.

"We'll have a mechanism established to allow us access to as many people as possible," Martinek said.

The team also will consult with Joe Martin, director of academic programs and development, and David Gross, director of all other college campuses, because the new management system must be compatible with the management of the other campuses.

New a-v equipment received by centre

By Gerry Shultz

The Learning Resource Centre's audio-visual (AV) department at Conestoga College's Doon campus has received the last of the new AV equipment purchased from the $10 million excellence fund set up by the provincial government.

The main purpose of the fund is to assist the colleges in the purchase of instructional equipment.

"It was like Christmas," said Brent Davidson, AV technician at the resource centre. "We can really use the extra equipment."

Davidson said the AV department hasn't received this much quality equipment since 1978.

Some of the equipment that the college purchased included eight Sony three-quarter-inch video playback machines, five Sony recorders, six Panasonic one-half-inch VHS machines, 40 new Bell and Howell overhead projectors, some Elmo 16 mm movie projectors, and 58 carts.

"We received the video equipment in May. The rest of the equipment did not arrive until July," said Davidson.

He said the new equipment is a welcome addition to the AV department but is not replacing any of the old equipment.

"The AV department will be using the old equipment until it cannot be used anymore. There is really no life expectancy for all the equipment we use. We just use it until it won't function anymore and then we use it for parts or keep it for other colleges that might need parts," Davidson said. "Some of the equipment is quite old and parts are hard to get."

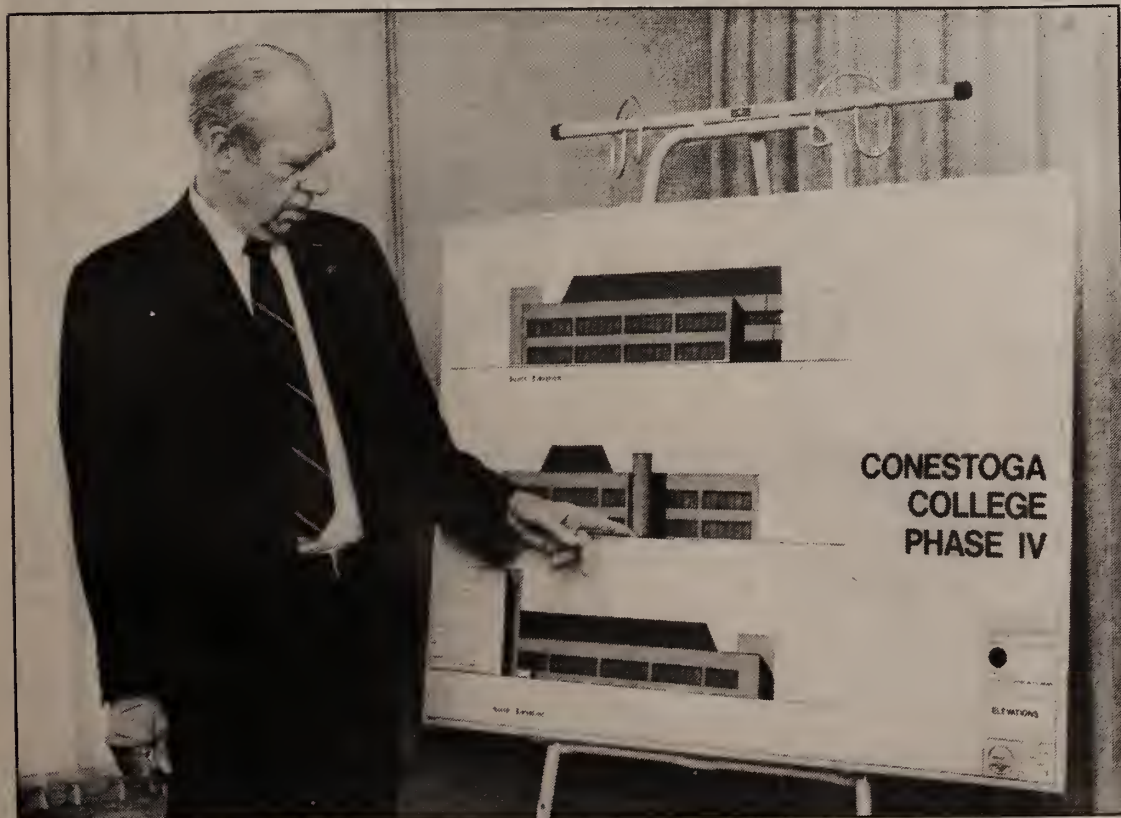

Practice makes perfect

Westinghouse employees used the Detweiller centre for three days for product demonstrations and to practise clean-up procedures and spill prevention. Heinz Peper, manager of the centre, said he is pleased that industry uses the facility for training.

New nursing building to be ready next year

College president Kenneth Hunter indicates the side view of the new facilities.

By Monty Kersell

Planning and design of the new health sciences building at Doon campus is under way and tenders for the foundation contract will be called for this month, Conestoga College president Kenneth Hunter announced at a press conference Oct. 2.

Construction is scheduled to start in October with completion expected in mid-August, 1987. The building will be located across from the service facilities and will be connected to the main campus building.

The expansion means about 300 students from Kitchener-Waterloo and St. Mary's hospitals in Kitchener, about 200 from St. Joseph's Hospital in Guelph and about 100 staff and faculty will be added to Doon campus.

About 25 ambulance and emergency care students and 30 registered nursing assistant students also will be located there.

The additional students at Doon will require expansion of the Learning Resource Centre and the cafeteria, which will be done while construction is under way and for some time beyond, Hunter said.

The total cost of the new building and upgrading of other facilities is estimated at $3.5 million. This is a step toward enhancing the quality of education for health science students, said Hunter.

"The nursing students will have an opportunity to interact, both in work and play, with other students," Hunter said.

"That, in itself, is very valuable in learning, particularly for students who do have to, in the course of their careers, deal with a broad variety of people.

"They've been isolated from other students and the nursing faculty have been isolated from other faculty," he said. "The nursing faculty can gain by their opportunity to interact with other faculty."

Other benefits will come from improved access to the Learning Resource Centre and computer facilities, he said.

Last April, the college was told by Kitchener-Waterloo See Building, page 3

Immature students

A person who deliberately tries to cause potentially harmful accidents has no place at Conestoga College.

Especially when the attempt distracts people from their jobs and places innocent bystanders in danger.

I refer to an incident which occurred during the Endless Summer pub, when a young man unfastened the wing nut support of the spotlight.

If it had not been for the quick action of one member of Endless Summer's crew, the spotlight would have fallen on a group of people with their backs turned to it.

After the pub, this individual incited a crowd to bounce a car into what they believed was the proper parking angle, and then let the air out of the tires.

Of course, all these little events were done for a laugh and to have some fun, and all were done at the expense of others.

Such an immature attitude is common at the public school level, but not at the college level.

College students are supposedly mature enough not to place others in danger, and to respect property which does not belong to them.

Perhaps administration made some great error and enrolled someone's kid brother, rather than the real McCoy.

At least we can hope that the coward — I call him coward, as he made a habit of running away from the least threat of being caught — was not a Conestoga student.

Perhaps he would reconsider attending the next pub, or, if he chooses to attend, will participate in the positive activities offered to students.

Question of the Week

Should the death penalty be reinstated?

"Yes if people take away someone else's life, then those people should have their lives taken away."
Jim Percival — mechanical engineering, 2nd year

"No. It's punishing them by doing the same thing they did, so it's wrong."
Louise Bairos — computer programmer analyst, 1st year

"Yes. I guess primarily because anybody who commits a crime like murder should be punished severely rather than being put in jail for five or 10 years."
Joan Barendregt — business administration - accounting, 3rd year

"In some situations, I think some people can be rehabilitated. I think mistakes can be made and some people could be punished for crimes they didn't commit."
Steve Hoffard — business administration - management, 3rd year

"No, I think people can improve their attitudes. If society can put them in an environment where they can improve themselves, it would be much better than getting rid of them."
Shiv Talwar — technology teacher

"It should be reinstated. If they are criminally insane and they can't be reformed, then they shouldn't be kept sitting in jail cells and costing taxpayers money."
Sandi Cousineau — early childhood education, 1st year

Finding a place to do homework is not easy

By Dan Schiller

Wanting to do homework on campus is not an easy chore. In fact, it is next to impossible.

Sitting down in the cafeteria to do homework or to study is a real challenge.

Because of the hustle and bustle of the cafeteria, it is very difficult to have some peace and quiet to do your work.

Run to the library, you say? Not likely. The library, which is supposed to be a quiet place to read and study, is turning out to be nothing but a social hangout. Constant talking, horseplay, and local laughter make the library anything but peaceful.

Now where. You've gone to two places already, and now must resort to, yes, the dreadful lounge.

Walking into the lounge, stale cigarette smoke, loud music, garbage and the bang of video games force you to grimace and walk out.

Where can one go to study? Well, if it isn't too cold, the banks of the pond offer a good calm retreat. But, if it is cold, your best bet might be to try and find a vacant classroom.

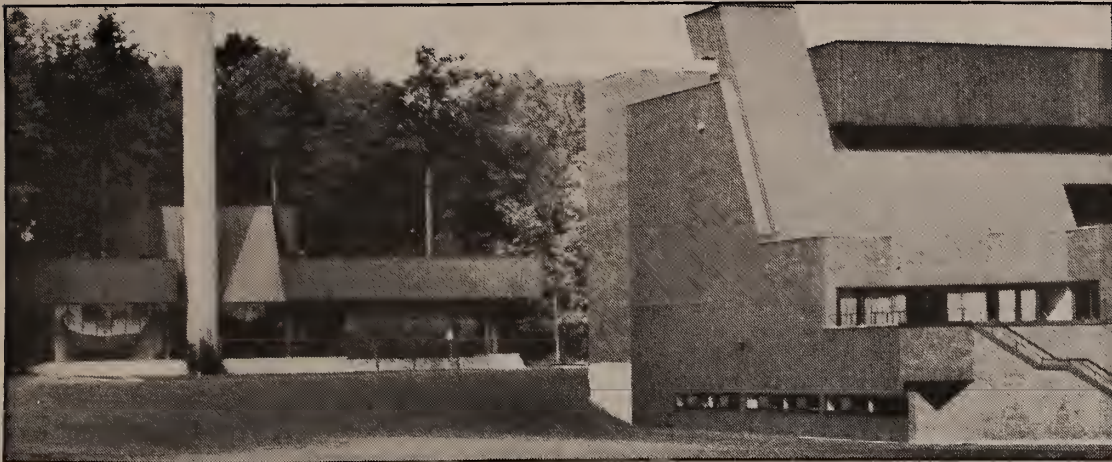

If all these places turn out to be impossible for you, there is always your car. Who could possibly bother you in your car? Well, as long as you are parked legally, you have found a perfect spot.

With the radio playing softly in the background, you can now ease back and get down to business. Don't forget though, to watch the time, for you do not want to be late for your class.

For those who do not own cars, there is only one solution. You will probably have to do your work at home. This means no procrastinating. If you do your studying and homework at home, make sure the work gets done. If not, you will have to face the wicked noise and disruption of the social nonsense at the college.

Unique financing to pay for nursing building

The health sciences wing will be built on this site and annexed to the main building. Monty Kersell/Spoke

By Monty Kersell

The $3.5 million needed for the new health sciences building at Doon campus will be borrowed from a chartered bank and the loan repaid under a unique arrangement with the Ministry of Colleges and Universities.

"The financial arrangements are of significant interest in that this is a first for the province of Ontario," said Conestoga College president Kenneth Hunter at a press conference Oct. 2 to announce the details.

All colleges in Ontario had to expand into rented space because of rapid growth of the colleges, coupled with budget restraint by the province, he said.

"That has placed a severe strain on the ability of the provincial government to provide capital for facilities."

Conestoga College now rents about 25 per cent of its space.

By building the health sciences facilities the college is replacing space it has rented. The ministry will divert the money it gives the college for that rental toward amortizing the loan over its 10-year life.

Should this be successful, it will provide a policy for the province to use in converting rented space to owned space, Hunter said.

Hospital that the lease for space used by nursing students would not be renewed. The hospital has since agreed to extend the lease to August 1987, when the new facilities will be ready.

Approximately 53,000 square feet of space now is rented from the three hospitals, Hunter said.

The new building will be two storeys and will have between 40,000 and 45,000 square feet, said a news release distributed at the press conference.

Hunter said the college was unable to rent suitable paces because anything that is available is too expensive, inappropriate, or would require renovations to conform to building codes.

"At the end of the lease it's sunk money," he said.

While searching for leased space, an alternative plan to build was also developed and proposed to the Ministry of Colleges and Universities.

"This happened in a hurry," he said. "Normally we think of government as being slow moving and it often is."

"In the space of about three months all these complexities were studied, brought together and a decision was made."

The firm of Horton & Ball, Walter Fedy McCargar Hachborn will do the planning and design of individual components, which will be tendered and then built, Hunter said.

He said this system of contract management should give greater control over the cost of construction, noting that the new 13-storey tower at the head office of Mutual Life in Waterloo is being built in the same way.

Few reps attend DSA meeting

By Deanna Ball

Three student representatives, out of an expected 16, appeared for the first Doon Student Association (DSA) board of directors' meeting Sept. 24.

Paul Colussi, vice-president of the DSA, said prior to the meeting that students were picking up nomination sheets for board positions but were not returning them.

Approximately 12 nominations had been returned. The greatest response came from the management students, and the least response from the technology wing.

Colussi said the greater response from management could have been because duties of the board of directors are related to management courses and that those taking out forms plan to apply for DSA duties the following year.

"By applying early, students are getting in on the ground floor of the management structure of DSA, and are not going at it cold like (president) Bruce Hunking and myself," said Colussi.

Although the first meeting was 10 minutes late in starting, no other nominees appeared.

"Apparently, no one knew or bothered to show up, although it was advertised in Spoke and on the campus radio," said Hunking.

However, the meeting continued as planned, with discussion centred around November's planned activities, including ideas for National Alcohol Awareness Week.

Also discussed were ticket sales for the Oktoberfest Night to be held at Queensmount Arena. Tickets are $3 each, with a maximum of six tickets per customer.

"If any students have any ideas for National Alcohol Awareness Week, feel free to bring them to me," said Sandy Nay, DSA activities co-ordinator.

Graduates being tracked

Students who graduated from Conestoga College in the spring of 1986 are being tracked down by central student services.

They are being sought for the annual placement report which details the students' employment status, wage earnings and whether or not they found work in their related fields.

Tracking of students for the annual report begins six months after they leave the college, said Bill Cleminson, associate director of central student services.

Facelift for lounge now may not happen

By Dan Schiller

Plans to renovate the student lounge at Doon campus have been put on hold, according to Phil Olinski, Doon Student Association business manager, who says the college has done all it can.

The DSA set aside $5,000 from its budget to aid in renovating lounge after the administration said there was a shortage of money for the project, said Olinski.

After the DSA put forth the proposal to help fund the project, it was sent to the Ministry of Colleges and Universities. The DSA requested a reply by April 30, 1986, said Olinski.

The proposal, which would have cost $17,000, would have included many minor repairs and new furniture to replace the decade-old furniture.

But, because the ministry has failed to respond, Olinski said, the money could be put to better use.

"It doesn't make sense to set aside $5,000 for nothing," said Olinski. Varsity sports as well as student needs could get use out of the money. It's better than having it stagnate."

The college lounge, on the other hand, doesn't seem to be bothering the new students.

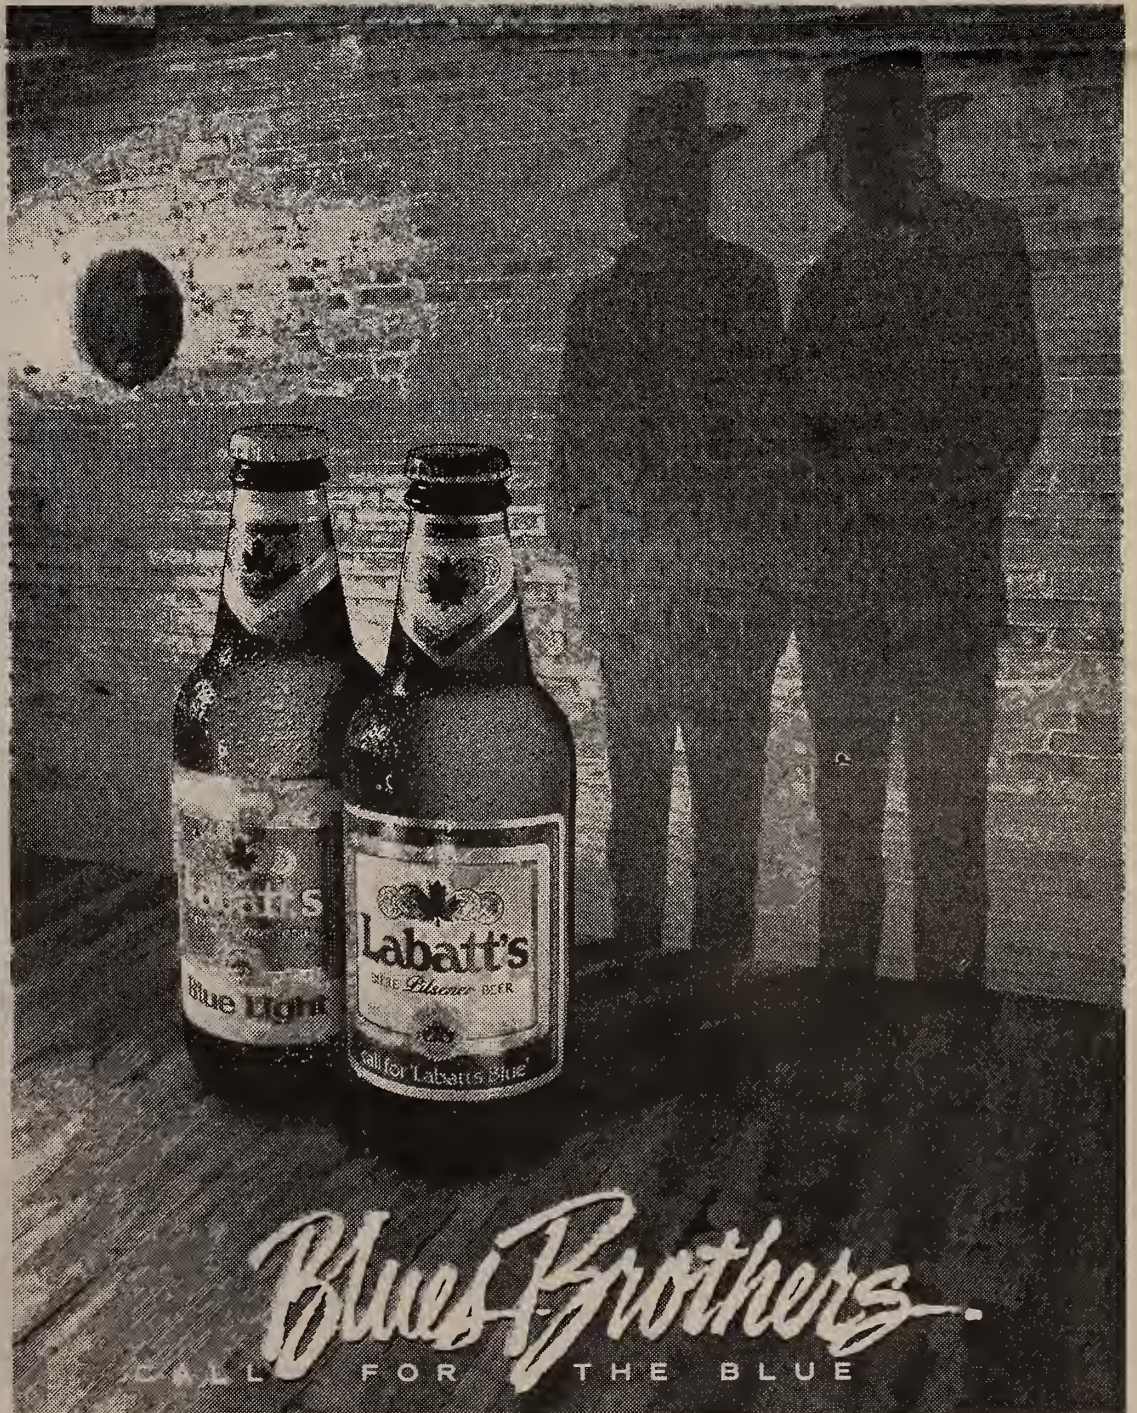

Yelena Rattsen, a first-year accounting student, said she sees nothing wrong with the lounge. She said she likes it because "it's a nice place to come to relax in."

Derrick Brommersma, a first-year mechanical design and analysis student, felt much the same way although he admitted the lounge looked a little tattered and rough.

Gord Heimpel, a second-year technology student, said it would be a good idea to fix it up a bit, but people should not expect much from a lounge.

"If the furniture and rugs were replaced, there would just be more holes and tears put into the new furniture," Heimpel said.

The proposal to renovate the lounge still remains in the ministry's hands, said Olinski, "but because of the bureaucratic process, it is taking time."

News briefs

No book fines planned

Conestoga College will not follow the recent trend of other educational institutions or public libraries in levying fines or sending collection agencies for books that are overdue or misplaced.

"The loss of books, or books that are overdue longer than they should be, isn't a major problem for the learning resource centre," said Linda Krotz, supervisor and administrator for the centre at Doon campus.

Krotz said that the centre's current system is working.

"The need for fines isn't necessary because the faculty and student population are not abusing the system to the point where fines are warranted," Krotz said.

"The present system would have to deteriorate tremendously before we use such drastic measures as fines or a collection agency."

The procedure of recovering books is usually a reminder notice or notices informing the person that the books are past the due date.

If the reminder notices are ignored, a letter from the director of finance's office is then issued.

Krotz said action seldom goes beyond this point.

"The learning resource centre is small in comparison to public and university libraries, so we aren't dealing with a massive population," she said.

"Books and information gathered in the centre are geared for the programs in the college."

Every year, new books are ordered to replace books that are outdated, in bad condition, or misplaced.

Lunch cart now in hall

People at Conestoga College who like to grab a quick bite but don't like waiting in long cafeteria lineups now have an alternative.

A lunch cart is operating on the second floor of the college in the hallway near room 2A56.

Jackie van Trigt, manager of Beaver Foods, said the service was started to accommodate people who didn't have a chance to get to the cafeteria.

Van Trigt said the service was also for "people who didn't have time to stand in line." They come down to the cafeteria to get something but can't because of the lineup.

The new cart has coffee, doughnuts, sandwiches, and basic items to provide a snack.

Margaret Clark, an employee who handles the new service, said the response has been wonderful. "People are pleased that they don't have to walk so far or wait so long."

The cart is really for people who "eat and run," she added.

With the good reaction received so far some improvements to the cart are planned, said van Trigt. "We plan to put a coffee machine right on the cart which should make things more efficient."

Demand high for courses

The continuing education department has had to offer six additional courses for the fall semester because of a "high enrolment rate and a long waiting list."

Barb Dietrich, of the continuing education department, said that "last year was busy . . . but I don't think it was as busy as this year. We have had to add extra courses because we had a long waiting list."

Additions have been made in the following courses: numerical machining, travel one, beautiful you, furniture refinishing, and introductory financial accounting.

Dietrich said the high enrolment this year was caused by two factors: few cancellations and good promotion.

"We have had very few cancellations and so a lot of the courses have filled up. The numbers will be quite high later on but we won't know until we do our audit report."

Dietrich also said the continuing education catalogue "is a little more accepted as an advertising tool than it has been in the past. Things are being listed under different headings than they used to be . . . and people are responding positively to this."

"The catalogue now lists all the programs at the front and gives course descriptions near the end. They have set it up a lot better and have made it more understandable," Dietrich said.

Real estate courses full

An introduction to real estate is the name and learning to sell is its game. In a booming era of booming home-hunting, real estate agents are making worn paths up the ladder of success.

This might explain the overcrowding in not only Doon campus classrooms, but in the Guelph and Stratford campuses as well.

The course is offered at Bingeman Park in Kitchener during the day because classrooms are filled with full-time students.

The course is 30 hours in length, takes five weeks to complete, and enables the graduate to register to sell real estate.

The course is split into three segments. At present, there are three courses being held, and each segment holds 35 people. Registration for the winter session will begin in December.

Endless Summer gives flawless performance

By Gerry Shultz

The Endless Summer theme pub at Conestoga College's Doon campus on Oct. 2 was an evening of fun, entertainment, nostalgic 1960s beach music and a flawless performance by Endless Summer.

It didn't take long for the crowd of about 240 to respond to the music. People danced as soon as the band started playing. It was a night to enjoy yourself and get crazy.

The band's rendition of Beach Boys' hits and other music from that era provided the audience with a refreshing interpretation.

Throughout the night the band encouraged the crowd to participate in the music. It was this crowd participation that helped create the wild atmosphere that has been missing in previous pubs.

The strongest aspect of the band, other than members' technicolor shirts, was its stage presence. The musicians never lost touch with the audience. They showed the crowd they were there to have a good time.

Endless Summer performed familiar tunes such as Help Me Rhonda, Fun Fun Fun, I Get Around, Surf's Up and Dion's The Wanderer.

At the beginning of their second set, lead singer TJ Tyler and the Lutzko brothers, Dave and Phil, had the dancers gather close to the stage and showed them how to do the hand jive and other popular dances of that era. The crowd was more than willing to participate.

The endless summer theme was popular with people attending the pub.

"I like the theme and atmosphere created tonight. It seems that everyone here is enjoying themselves," said Mark McGlynn, a law and security student.

"The band is really great. They get the people involved," said Lynn Murray, a business student.

"They are very entertaining. The endless summer theme is a good idea. Besides, it's nice to become crazy once in a while," said Paula Mattarelli, in food and beverage management.

Wendy Walker, a graduate of the recreation leadership program, said she has seen the Beach Boys in person and thought the band did a "remarkable imitation" of them. "The band is great . . . the men are better," said nursing student Susie Bernhardt.

David McNab and Sandy Law were named Mr. and Ms. Muscle at the Oct. 2 pub.

College gigs are 'fantastic'

By Gerry Shultz

Endless Summer, which performed at the Oct. 2 pub, wants to be remembered as more than a band which sings Beach Boys' tunes and California surf music. Band members want their music to be taken seriously.

"We are moving towards a new, modern beach sound. Our music is different compared to today's music," Phil Lutzko, bass player and the band's spokesman, said in an interview.

Lutzko said they enjoy what they are doing and believe there is a demand for their music.

"There aren't that many bands, if any, performing this type of music. When we perform we usually receive a great response from the crowd. People want to dance and have fun and that is why we perform the music we do."

Endless Summer is comprised of Phil Lutzko on bass, Don Lutzko on lead guitar, T.J. Tyler providing lead vocals, Jim Adams on drums, and Gary Gold on rhythm guitar. All members of the band sing harmony.

"We may perform another band's music but I believe we have our own interpretation of the way it is performed. Endless Summer doesn't want to be compared to anybody," said Lutzko.

The band is originally from Toronto and has been together for close to three years.

Band members recently cut a single called Johnny Cool and are hoping to cut an album in the near future.

"Endless Summer wants to give people a good time. We want them to get up and dance and enjoy themselves," said Lutzko.

Endless Summer is touring the college circuit and was to travel east after the Conestoga performance.

"Everywhere we perform the response has been great. People want to be entertained and we try not to let them down," said Lutzko.

He said the band looks forward to college gigs because they usually are one big party and the atmosphere is a lot more relaxed than in a bar.

"College gigs are fantastic. The people are usually in a party mood and that is when we are at our best," said Lutzko.

Nursing student Tori Scherer was selected as Tacky Tourist.

Students raise funds

Students enrolled in the law and enforcement administration program (LASA) at the Doon campus are selling tickets to raise funds for the 6th annual LASA Awards Banquet.

Fund-raising subsidizes the cost of the tickets for the banquet. Last year's ticket price was $7.50.

Some proceeds from the money raised are donated to a foundation related to the law enforcement field. Last year $500 was donated to Child Find.

The tickets are available until Oct. 24 from any LASA student

LASA students are selling packaged cheese and Christmas gift packages, and are taking orders until Nov. 28.

Student council prefers presidents' group

By Deanna Ball

Conestoga College's student council is not a member of the Ontario Federation of Students (OFS) but is a member of the Ontario Community Colleges Student Presidents Association (OCCSPA).

"The college does not belong to OFS, as it looks out for the rights of universities more than colleges, as OFS is mainly comprised of universities," said Doon Student Association President Bruce Hunking.

The OCCSPA is comprised of presidents from 22 community colleges, without extensive cost to the students. The OFS charges a membership fee.

OCCSPA fees may run less than $1 per student, while the OFS fee is $3 per student.

"If we were to be involved with OFS, we wouldn't be getting our money's worth, whereas with OCCSPA we are.

Earlier this year OCCSPA was recognized by the provincial government as a speaker for students.

Sault College Student Union, a one-time member of OFS, held a referendum in 1985 and a decision was made to leave

OFS. It is now a member of OCCSPA.

The OFS has since taken legal action in connection with the decision. When questioned about the action, Sault College Student Union President Ron Stewart said he had no comment.

Stratford campus welcomes new nurse

By Deanna Ball

Three days a week, Conestoga College's Stratford Campus is graced with a new face.

Mary Murphy, an occupational health nurse, can be found on campus Monday, Wednesday and Friday, between 8:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m.. The rest of her time is spent at the nursing school.

Murphy lives in Stratford and said she enjoys working with students and helping them maintain their health.

Although the Stratford campus has no doctor at the present time, Murphy said she hopes there will be one available by the end of October.

However, she does have a list of doctors willing to take new patients.

Although she was still setting up her office at the time of the interview, she was available to students through appointment.

"My door is always open, even though I'm not always there. If students have any suggestions, I'd be glad to hear them," said Murphy.

Okto(beer)fest pub planned for Queensmount

By Deanna Ball

The Doon Student Association (DSA) and the Kitchener Lions Club are sponsoring an Oktoberfest pub at Queens-mount Arena Oct. 28.

Billed as Oktoberfest Night, it is the first of three pubs to be held off campus this year, and is exclusively for Conestoga students.

There were 1,400 tickets printed, to be sold at $3 each, with a maximum purchase of six tickets per student.

Oktoberfest Night is usually a sold-out event, said Sandy Nay, activities co-ordinator for the DSA, adding that she expected this year would be no exception.

"Last year's Oktoberfest Night was sold out, with 1,200 students attending the festivities at the Annex," said Nay.

Since the Annex has been torn down, the pub was moved to Queensmount, and students should remember the proper dress code is required, she said.

This year's performers will be Walter Ostanek and his band.

Kitchener Beverages Ltd. will supply designated drivers with free soft drinks for the evening. Designated drivers must sign their names on a list at the door.

For those students who would rather drink and not drive, and have not chosen a designated driver, Kitchener Transit and Molson's have extended Friday's and Saturday's bus services to 3 a.m..

Buses will arrive at the downtown terminal every 45 minutes.

The DSA will sponsor two other pubs off campus. The first is the Rock and Roll at Bedrock pub, to be held at the lounge at Bingeman Park Nov.13. The second is the DSA and athletics awards banquet to be held at the Transylvania Club April 9.

Show cancelled

A fashion show isn't a show without the fashions.

The Sweat Shoppe Fashion Show was cancelled because some of the outfits necessary to complete the show weren't received in time, said Sweat Shoppe owner Johanna Simons.

Simons has postponed the show until the second week in November because Monica Schmidt, one of the models, will be busy with the Miss Oktoberfest and Miss Canada pageants. Two of the male models in the show will be in Florida for the first week of November.

There will be about eight models in the show, and they will be divided into pairs. All the models in the show are students from Conestoga College who have had some prior modelling experience.

The show will feature jackets, shorts, track suits, and T-shirts, along with the fashion line — the casual, but dressy fashions, including rugged shirts for the men and one-piece outfits for the women.

Simons said she is staging the show because students can get a better idea of how an outfit will look by seeing it on another person. It is difficult to determine what clothes displayed on a table would look like on someone, so the fashion show will add a bit of life to the outfits, she said.

Simons said the show "will be bigger and better than last year."

The touch football team will travel to Hamilton on Oct. 17 and 18 for the OCAA championship.

Softball

The women's softball team split its two games the week of Sept. 29, defeating Humber 10-4 but losing 1-0 against Seneca.

In the Humber game, Conestoga took a 3-2 lead after one inning, then upped the margin to 8-2 after the second.

Sue Blacklock picked up her third win of the season, as she gave up only one hit through five innings pitched.

In the Seneca game, both teams remained scoreless through six-and-a-half innings. Seneca broke the tie with a game-winning run in the bottom of the seventh.

Soccer

The soccer team's hopes of reaching the playoffs were darkened as they tied one of their two games and lost the other the week of Sept. 29.

At Redeemer College in Hamilton, Conestoga was held to a 2-2 tie. Marcel Desmeules scored both goals for the Condors.

At George Brown College, after giving up an early goal to the Huskies, the Condors lost 2-0.

The soccer team had to win its next three games for a shot at the playoffs.

Women's softball team wins

The women's varsity softball team continued its successful season with a 10-4 win over Humber College at the Conestoga diamond Oct. 1.

After an exchange of runs during the first inning, Conestoga suddenly exploded with five runs in the second.

The inning started with routine singles to right field. Sue Blacklock then banged a triple to left field, scoring two runs. Next was Susan Coveney. With a runner on base, Coveney smashed a home run, prompting the Humber coach to make a pitching change.

Later in the game, pitcher Sue Blacklock added some insurance by driving home a ninth run and crossed the plate herself for the final run.

Sandy Law, along with Blacklock, hit three for four en route to the win.

Coach Jim van Trigt said team members "are playing their best ball ever."

He attributed the success to

"good talent, good practice and good players." Van Trigt would not speculate on how far the team would go in the standings. He said it would be a jinx if he commented.

Cliff Condor, the college's sports mascot, was on hand at the game but few spectators were there. Van Trigt said he appreciates the five or so fans who showed up, but would like to see more.

"When I was in college, the sidelines and hills were jammed."

Varsity athletes of the week

Sue Blacklock

Law and security administration student Sue Blacklock, from the women's softball team, has been named female athlete of the week ending Oct. 4.

Blacklock was the winning pitcher and led the offence for the team. Her efforts included three hits and three runs batted in, as Conestoga defeated Humber College 10-4 Oct. 1.

Guilio Mior

Guilio Mior, a mechanical engineering technician student and touch football player, has been named male athlete of the week for the week ending Oct. 3.

Mior was instrumental in the football team's two wins against only one loss at the Ontario College's Athletic Association (OCAA) West Division touch football tournament at Lambton College, Oct. 5.

He passed for one touchdown, scored two more and kicked a single point. Defensively, he made four interceptions.
